Red Riding Hat - Updated Version

There once was a chick named Red Riding Hat who was an absolute peach of a kid. The wolves in the neighborhood always had their eyes on her. Now, Red went to see her granny one day loaded with grapes. Red was the apple of her eye and often gave her a hand with cleaning up the hut.

Skipping her way through the oaks and spruces, Red smelled something foul. A sheep in wolf's clothing? Bah-humbug. However, she just made it to granny's pad by the hair on her chinny chin, chin, when it started to rain cats and dogs. Outside there were several puddles of water. "Isn't that ducky," she said as she pulled a bottle of champagne from her basket.
