Processing Speed

Processing speed is a cognitive ability that could be defined as the time it takes a person to do a mental task and the speed in which they can understand and react to information.

For each activity, use a timer to time the amount of time it takes the participant to complete the task. For the best results, perform the same activity on separate occasions until there is a new personal record. Timing the activities will help measure the progress of processing speed.

Materials: Timer